DISAM JOURNAL "FEATURE ARTICLE"

United States Coast Guard:
International Engagement and Involvement in Security Assistance

The United States Coast Guard (USCG) has protected America's interests through more than 200 years of continuous service. The USCG is responsible for saving lives and property at sea, providing a safe, efficient maritime transportation system, protecting the marine environment, enforcing laws and treaties in the maritime region, and defending national security interests and maritime borders. The demand for these services is on the rise: today's globally linked economies, revolutions in maritime transportation and information systems, emerging threats to the marine environment, and changing national
